

Introduction to Gender Verification

Keysafe recently introduced a Gender Verification option to improve the quality of our Internet based chastity experience. This brief note explains what gender verification is, why we offer it and instructions as to how to get verified.

The Keysafe site has always been designed for serious chastity and for serious holders and wearers. While we welcome people just starting to explore chastity and those interested in chastity as fantasy, our primary goal is to provide a premier site for those committed to chastity.

Trust is a very important component of a meaningful chastity experience. Recently, some wearers have had unpleasant experiences when they discovered that their “female” holders were actually men pretending to be women. Keysafe does not support or want to encourage deception. While we recognize the attractiveness of fantasy role play, we believe that both parties must willingly consent to such role-play. Enough people have complained about non-consensual fantasy role-play that Keysafe now offers a means to help wearers and holders have more confidence in the true gender of their on-line chastity partners.

Since the problem is men pretending to be women (we know of no cases where the reverse has happened), we now offer our female members the option to become verified. If you see the words “verified” next to the gender field it means that a member of the Keysafe staff has personally interacted with the woman.

If you see non-verified, it means the person has either chosen NOT to be verified or has not yet contacted the Keysafe staff to become verified. Given the (unfortunately) common practice of men pretending to be women online, the safest assumption is that a non-verified person is a man and not a woman.

If you are currently a non-verified female and wish to be verified, the process is simple. Contact Keysafe help and we will set up a short web cam talk or if that is not possible a phone call. We will ask you a few questions to verify that you are the person asking to be verified and that is it. The process should take just a couple of minutes.

Additionally, we now offer a new gender option for men to choose a female role for on-line fantasy role play. If you are interested in this option, just choose Female (Role) for your gender.

Those wearers who care about their holder’s gender now have more information to guide their decisions. If you want to know that your keys are held by a woman, then only offer them to (or authorize) Verified females.
